Eric L. Tweedie, MD Anesthesiology

Dr. Tweedie earned his medical degree from Dalhousie University Medical School in Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1973 after receiving his Bachelor of Science in Biology from Acadia University in Wolfville, Nova Scotia, in 1973. He completed his internship at Dalhousie University and his Anesthesiology Residency training at Fletcher Allen Hospital, through the University of Vermont, in Burlington, VT, in 1984. Dr. Tweedie went on to complete fellowships in Critical Care & Anesthesia, Neuroanesthesia, and Cardiac Anesthesia; as well as additional training in Pediatric Anesthesia at the IWK Hospital for Children in Halifax.

As an anesthesiologist, Dr. Tweedie first provides his patients with the knowledge and understanding they need about procedures they are about to undergo. He then consults with the surgical team, during which they create a plan tailored to the individual that ensures their comfort and safety. After surgery, he follows up with his patient and is an integral component of the patient's individualized plan of care.

Dr. Tweedie has provided anesthesiology in clinical and hospital settings for several years, including serving as Chief of Anesthesia. He is a Diplomate of the American Board of Anesthesiology.
